Construction Works, Autumn

Facade work is well advanced, and the aim is to complete most of the bricklaying before freezing temperatures arrive. Several different bricklaying patterns have been used in the facade.

Inside the building, work is progressing from the lower floors upwards. On the first floor, fixed furniture and fittings are already visible. On the top floor, partition walls have been installed, while surface painting is still ongoing.

The landscaping contractor has visited the site to complete the first outdoor works before the winter break. During the autumn, geothermal heating has been introduced alongside district heating to provide warmth for the building.
